ALAMO GROUP INC. HIGHLIGHTS OPERATIONAL STATUS

SEGUIN, Texas, March 26, 2020 -- Alamo Group Inc. (NYSE: ALG) today announced that several of its manufacturing operations are either temporarily closed or reducing their level of production due to repercussions from the COVID-19 pandemic. Most of the Company's products have been deemed essential in the various jurisdictions where the Company operates, so while many of the Company's facilities continue to operate with minimal disruption, several locations are operating at reduced capacity or are temporarily closed due to a combination of health concerns, government directives, supply chain disruptions and customer restrictions.

Previously, the Company announced the temporary closure of its facilities in France, and while those facilities remain closed, they are working on plans to resume limited production in the second half of April. Additionally, Alamo's two UK facilities will be temporarily closing this week, but like our French operations, expect to be operational by the second half of April or as of such time as the impacts of coronavirus are mitigated. In North America, the Company's Super Products Plant near Milwaukee also closed temporarily on Monday, but is expected to reopen in a few days, and several of our other operations are furloughing some of their workforce temporarily due to the factors listed above. Plus, all of the Company's plants are experiencing somewhat higher levels of employee absences, as some employees are self-quarantining, others are staying home to care for children out of school and still others are out for normal reasons of absence. It should also be noted that the Company has approximately 500 employees working remotely and that number is growing daily as conditions allow.

Despite the above challenges, Alamo Group continues to conduct business and meet most customer requirements in a timely fashion. Even the Company's operations that are temporarily closed have the capability to meet the most urgent needs of our customers.

All in all, Alamo continues to function, albeit at a reduced level. In doing so, we are committed to the safety and wellbeing of our employees and continue to ensure our facilities follow all the recommended standards for safety and hygiene. At the same time, we will continue to support the needs of our customers to the extent we are capable.

We appreciate that this is a difficult situation for all concerned and want to thank everyone for their understanding and support. We also wish everyone well in these uncertain times.
